COPYRIGHT TRANSFER

In exchange for the Gemological Institute of America ('GIA')'s efforts in reviewing, editing, and publishing "[insert title of article]" ('the Work') in Gems & Gemology ('the Journal'), we ('the Authors') transfer to GIA, its successors and assigns, all right, title, and interest in the Work (including all text, illustrations, photographs, and supporting elements) as published in any medium of expression, together with full right and authority to claim all worldwide common law and statutory rights associated with and equivalent to copyright, including moral rights. GIA's rights include but are not limited to: (1) electronic use in any form, including Internet publication in whole or in part; (2) compilation with other works, including in print monograph and CD-ROM or other electronic databases; (3) serialization over one or more issues of the Journal; and (4) all other ancillary rights.

GIA licenses back to the Authors separately and individually the rights to: (1) excerpt the Work in other publications in lengths not to exceed 250 words; (2) reprint the Work upon prior written request to and approval by GIA; (3) make copies of the Work for use in classroom teaching or for internal distribution within the Author's place of employment; (4) reuse all or part of the Work in a book written by the Authors after the Work is published in the Journal; and (5) present the Work orally at any function. Any copies or reprints of the article that the Authors make pursuant to these terms must include the following statement: "Copyright 20XX Gemological Institute of America. All rights reserved. Used by permission." This transfer covers only copyright and related rights to the Work itself, and the Authors retain all other proprietary rights to the subject of the Work, such as patent rights.

The Authors warrant that: (1) they are the rightful owners of all right, title, and interest in the Work and have the authority to transfer all right, title, and interest to GIA; (2) they possess the right to enter into this agreement and to submit the article for publication; (3) the article is an original work that has not been published elsewhere; and (4) the article has been submitted in English to the Journal only and to no other publication.
